

WOMEN CHEER FIGHT VICTOR IN BROOKLYN RING

Applaud Wildly as Spike Robinson and Jack Daly Battle to Finish.

300 GUESTS SEE "GO."

Knockout Ends Gory Contest in Fourth Round—Feather-Weight Bout, Too.

The women of New York can go to prize fights as well as smoke in public. Many of them, handsomely dressed and as enthusiastic as their male friends, proved it last night and loudly applauded a four round go between Spike Robinson and Jack Daly at the New Polo Athletic Club, Lawrence street, Brooklyn.

There were 300 members and guests, and, although both men fought desperately and were badly battered when Robinson put Daly down for the count in the fourth, the women cheered throughout and gave the winner an ovation.

The house where the fight took place is an old-fashioned high stoop structure, with a large front and back porch connected by folding doors. Careful arrangements had been made to keep the "go" from the police. The club members and their women friends entered the place singly or in pairs.

As a pugilistic cocktail the show started with a bout between featherweights, Frankie Sheehan, of Springfield, Mass., and Jimmy Williams. In the second round Sheehan rocked Williams's head with two stiff lefts, drawing first blood. The women in the audience clapped their hands at the sight of the blood and cheered on the fighters, while the men demanded a knockout.

Sheehan in the fourth round sent him crashing to the mat for the count with a right swing. Williams was carried from the ring by his seconds.

The main event, that between Daly and Robinson, was scheduled to go fifteen rounds.

In the fourth round Robinson smashed Daly on the jaw with his right, knocking him out. After the fight the 300 men and women quietly left the house.

At the clubhouse, it was denied that such a fight had taken place. In the neighborhood saloons the battle was the chief topic of conversation.
